COLONEL ROOSEVELT SAYS HE FOUND BARNE'S A "DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE"

Ex-President Scores in Clash with Opposing Counsel,
William M. Ivins.

Colonel, repeating the question.
"But I never held a meeting with him alone."
Mr. Roosevelt was asked why, if he thought Mr. Barne's corrupt, he accompanied him, advised with him and consulted him.
"Because, Mr. Ivins," started the colonel.
"I insist this witness must answer my questions, yes or no, when possible," shouted Mr. Ivins.
"He cannot answer 'yes or no' to that," said Bowers.
"I want to tell the jury," said Roosevelt.
"Yes, you are telling the jury a lot of things," retorted Ivins.
The court instructed Roosevelt to answer "yes or no" when possible and then amplify answers.
The question was then repeated.
"I advised with Mr. Barne's," said the colonel, "because I found Mr.

Barne's a 'Dr. Jeckyll and Mr. Hyde'." "I do not want that," interposed Mr. Ivins.
"Let him finish his answer," Mr. Bowers said.
"You asked the question," said Justice Andrews.
"He answered it," said Mr. Ivins.
"I did not finish my answer," declared the colonel.
"Go ahead," said the court.
"If my autobiography had been written as a political document, I might have mentioned Mr. Barne's," said the colonel, facing the jury and driving home each word.
"But my autobiography was written as a literary work and was not an appeal to the voters of New York. Therefore I refrained purposely from attacking Mr. Barne's."
The interrogation then jumped to Mr. Roosevelt's attack upon "invisible government" mentioned in his autobiography. Parts of the autobiography were read.
"I would not say so, but I do not remember much about Mr. Murphy before that," I think Mr. Murphy had to do with Mr. Carson of Brooklyn before he could become Democratic boss. There was also a battle with William J. Conner of Buffalo, but I cannot remember which side he was on."

Barne's above the ordinary political leaders."

WILLIAM M. IVINS,
counsel for William
Barne's in suit against Colonel Roosevelt.

Barne's above the ordinary political leaders."

"I thought his morality at least above the ordinary political and business morality and believed he had it in him to become a valuable leader in the State. I hoped to eliminate the bad in Mr. Barne's and develop the good."
"Why did you want to reform Mr. Barne's?"
"I found him a 'Dr. Jeckyll and Mr. Hyde,'" replied the colonel. "I wanted to save the 'Dr. Jeckyll' and kill the 'Mr. Hyde.' Mr. Barne's was only one of hundreds of politicians throughout the country in whom I was interested in trying to bring out the best there was in them—trying to make them better citizens."
"When did Dr. Jeckyll and Hyde separate?" asked Ivins.
"When did it become necessary to sever the ligament uniting these two personalities?" asked the colonel.
"It was not," said the colonel, laughing. "But rather a case of one absorbing the other—Dr. Jeckyll being swallowed up by Mr. Hyde."
Mr. Roosevelt admitted he never appointed Mr. Barne's to office, and said he entirely abandoned his missionary work in 1911.
The first question put the colonel by Ivins dealt with the Albany legislature while Roosevelt was governor in 1911.
"Who were the leaders in Albany then?" asked Mr. Ivins.
"I do not know," said Colonel Roosevelt.
"Who was chairman of the finance committee and the ways and means committee?"
"I remember Mr. Higgins (once governor) was chairman of the finance committee."
"Who was chairman of the ways and means committee?"
"I do not remember."
"I will consult the records," asked Ivins.
"I do not need my memory recalled," said the colonel with a smile.
"Do you remember that Mr. Alda was that chairman?"
"No."
"Did you vote an appropriation bill prepared by this committee?"
"It is claimed that Roosevelt drew a revolver and fired two shots at Leone, one hitting the left hand and the other the left hand of his wife. He held her with assault with a dangerous weapon."

TELLS OF LEADER.
The Democratic leadership was held in commission. Mr. Davis B. Hill was the up-State leader, with Richard Croker as leader in New York City. Croker's power rapidly growing at the expense of Hill, answered the colonel.
"What was the standing of Mr. Hill?"
"He was not influential as Mr. Platt and Mr. Odell," said Roosevelt.
Mr. Ivins then produced the autobiography written by Colonel Roosevelt in 1913 and asked the colonel about certain references to Senator

Platt, Mr. B. Odell, Dr. B. Hill, Richard Croker and William Barne's.
"I made no reference to Mr. Barne's," was the answer.
"Then your opinion of Mr. Barne's was not the same in 1913 as when you wrote the autobiography?"
"Which we complain," asked Ivins, "purposely refrained from saying anything malicious about Mr. Barne's. I was not writing my autobiography to appeal to the voters of New York State."

"I do not want that," interposed Mr. Ivins.
"Let him finish his answer," Mr. Bowers said.
"You asked the question," said Justice Andrews.
"He answered it," said Mr. Ivins.

MYSTERY IN CASE OF ALTON GIRL

ALTON, N. H., April 23.—Despite the fact that the local authorities today abandoned their quest for the two alleged assailants of fourteen-year-old Evelyn Jones, daughter of John K. Jones, a local farmer, the girl's father still maintains that the case contains an element of mystery. The police dropped their investigation following the girl's statement to the police, which was taken as an admission that the alleged attack was made only in her imagination. She made this admission to County Solicitor John Meserve of Alton and Judge Backford of Lanesboro. These two officials talked with the girl at the home of her sister today.

When told of the girl's alleged admission, Police Chief Brewster said: "I would be willing to give ten years of my life to clear up this mystery," he said today. "If I had a thousand dollars I would spend every cent of it on detective work. I would be to the very bottom of the case. I have questioned my daughter and she still sticks to the story that she was seized by two men. If the story is a 'take' perhaps the police can explain what became of her gold neck chain."

"If I ever find out who the man or men are who attacked Evelyn like this, for a man who will attack a little slip of a girl isn't fit to live."

Professor A. T. Davidson, Jr., Harvard's chief instructor, offers today as a cure to all the war ailments that human flesh is heir to. Talking about the Freshman singing competition at Harvard, Mr. Davidson writes in the Harvard Illustrated: "It is not enough that we should have a Freshman class that loves to sing, nor yet a whole college that loves to sing, but rather, that in time we shall have sent out a nation which, no matter what its internal differences of politics, race or creed, shall unite on the common ground of song."

FAVORS 'SOBER-UP' CLUB FOR DRUNKS

To remove the criminal taint placed upon drunkenness and to encourage the unfortunate against the use of alcoholic beverages, Superintendent Hollis M. Blackstone of the State Farm at Bridgewater today submitted his annual report to the Legislature, with the recommendation that he be given authority to organize a "sobering-up club."

Superintendent Blackstone, whose vigorous, short-arse oratorical jolts have made him prominent, says: "The suggestion is offered not as a (ad or lightning) reform, but from a ripe experience with and an abiding faith in our fellow-men. I have no desire to fill up on ginger tea or grape juice to test the aftermath of intemperance, or shoot up a wooden Indian to experience the mental effect of murder, but I do have an earnest desire to lessen the prison hardship for that portion of intemperate men and women who are willing to accept the suggested reform to the end that they may become members of our 'Sobering-up Club.'"

Superintendent Blackstone says there will always exist the disorderly, disgusting, peace-disturbing men and women who refuse and resent every tender of help or aid to sober up and be decent, but that all who are not of this type "want there are who want to quit the 'debauch'." He says, "But just full short of temperance and intemperance are still exposed to the same conditions and temptations."

With all the leniency and pap now being fed to serious crime, the unfortunate drunkard may justly appeal for some mitigation in classifying his offense—a fault habit as compared with criminal disposition, makes every man a murderer. Suppose the law could be made elastic enough to permit a discouraged alcoholic man to come and ask for care and direction until it was mutually agreed that he was again strong enough to face temptation? Is there any danger that the mastery of the law or the dignity of the court would be weakened or impaired by such a free and easy present? The practice would help to eliminate the criminal trade-mark of cuffs and chains."

Special Notice WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question and "How to Prevent Colds" is asked a thousand times every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather, but due to a disordered condition of the blood or lack of important food elements. In changing seasons fat-foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the body better able to withstand the varying elements.

This is the underlying reason why the medicinal fats in Scott's Emulsion quickly overcome colds and build strength to prevent more serious sickness. It contains nature's medicinal fats, so skillfully prepared that the blood profits from every drop, and it is free from harmful drugs or alcohol.

RUSSIAN ARMEN SHELL GERMAN

By FRANCIS LAYELLE MURRAY, Personal Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, April 22.—Russian aviators bombed the Germans at Plock and Mlawka Thursday, causing severe damage. These two raids were in retaliation for an attack made upon Warsaw by a German aviator the preceding day. A Russian aircraft dropped bombs upon the city. The German aviator who attacked the Russian city was shot down in the vicinity, while others burst in the city square along the German transport.

Four Russian airplanes bombarded the railway station at Mlawka and the German airfield at Rantky. Each of the attacks, except the bombing, were more than 100 hundred pounds. Three Russian aircraft were shot down today in the aeroplane hangars and two other German aeroplanes. Others were dropped in the German trenches about Mlawka.

Though subjected to a heavy fire from the German guns, the aeroplanes were undamaged, and returned safely to their station.

The German aviator who attacked Warsaw Wednesday morning dropped three bombs, one of which caused serious damage. During the afternoon, three other German aeroplanes tried to approach the city, but were forced away before they could pose the force.

RUSSIANS RESUME THE USZOK BATTLE; DEFEAT THE ENEMY IN GALICIA

By FRANCIS LAYELLE MURRAY, Personal Correspondent of the I. N. S. PETROGRAD, April 22.—Weather conditions in the Galician have now improved to such an extent that the Russians have been enabled to resume their offensive against the Austro-German positions at Uszok Pass. The flooded rivers are subsiding and the Russians are taking forward their heavy artillery.

Large Tonic reinforcements have arrived at Uszok, and west and east of the pass they are making frequent attacks against the Russian positions, but have been repulsed.

The Austro-German offensive from the Danube has apparently been completely checked. Official reports to the War Office state that the Russians are pressing the enemy back to the Carpathian with heavy losses.

POND IS DRAGGED FOR MISSING GIRL

commit suicide. I am dependent. Instead of being a help to you I have been a burden. I am going to Lynn to Floating Bridge Pond and throw myself in. Good-bye.

The girl's parents and Chief Grady of Peabody came here yesterday afternoon and told me about this note and the girl's disappearance."

STAFF POND SEARCH. The red hat found on the Salem end of the bridge was like one Esther wore from home. It had inside the crown a half-sheet of note paper with the name and address of Esther's mother on it.

With this alarming indication the Lynn police waited no longer, but started today to drag the pond water. Peabody, Grady, Churchill and Dwyer and William Moulton, who lives on a row boat with his wife Esther near the bridge, were given a girl of suicidal purpose would naturally throw herself in.

When the disappearance of Esther first became known there was speculation whether she had slipped with a Peabody young man who is said to have been quite attentive to her. But this young man had not left town, so the speculation theory had to be dropped.

But report was persistent, however, that romance had been a factor in the mystery.

Police Chief Grady of Peabody said today:

"I find that the girl had talked with several friends in a dependent manner of late. She was in the city away with herself before. In view of these circumstances, the mention of Floating Bridge Pond. We have had many conversations in regard to this pond, but I fear this was not it."

NO MENTION OF NOTE. Chief Grady made no mention of the suicide note or of his visit with the girl's parents to Chief Burrows of Lynn. The explanation of that came from the Lynn end.

and Lincoln, Neb.—and Denver, Colo.—and St. Louis, Mo. Not to mention Atlanta, Ga., and New Orleans, La., Boston, Mass., and Washington, D. C.

Is there any town in the country with over 50,000 inhabitants and a board of aldermen all its own? They heard of the Liberty Bell journey in the country school district too, and if Mayor Blankenship of Philadelphia doesn't have to hire a dozen brand new secretaries to answer long distance telephone and telegrams from mayor and boards of aldermen, and civic betterment committees from one end of the country to the other, he'll have to do it to get even half of the letters or one-fourth of the petitions that are rushing in from all parts of the country. The school boards in the different cities are particularly anxious. If there is a petition of a school in the United States who isn't conferring with its teachers on the quickest and best way to drill the children in certain patriotic songs, he must be doing something in the Great American Desert without even a wireless telegraph station within calling distance.

Here's what they're doing down in Los Angeles, April 20, 1915.
The City Council, at the urgent request of Mayor Rose, will today pass resolutions urging Mayor and Board Council of Philadelphia to have Liberty Bell shipped at Los Angeles for at least one day so the people may view it.

Mayor Rose has already communicated with Mayor Blankenship, and the school board and other civic bodies here will join in request so that school children particularly may see Liberty Bell. They have read so much about Los Angeles in making arrangements and elaborate preparation to ascertain the committee in charge of the bell during the stay here. Good for you, Los Angeles. You're in California. If you do agree to it, instead of just plain land.

Society houses are just what the bell is coming through by Ocean and Salt Lake or San Francisco. Los Angeles. That's for Mayor Blankenship of Philadelphia and committee to do up his bill. Every time it comes there will be a celebration that will make the very mountains in the world will be moving for months over even the memory of so much plain, simple American happiness, over such a plain, simple American thing as the Liberty Bell.

The daughters of the American Revolution have been in convention assembled in Washington, D. C., to-day. They have been busy electing a president, but not for the purpose of the election. The purpose of the election is to elect a president of the Liberty Bell.

Here's what the ex-State Regent of California, one of the most prominent members of the L. A. B. has to say about the very thing of the Liberty Bell.

Mayor Rose, April 22, 1915.
The Liberty Bell is the symbol of the American people. It is the symbol of the American people. It is the symbol of the American people.

And then a man born in America of American parents has to ask in his heart, in an American heart, one way to look at it, isn't it—and for that matter what is love good for?

What is honor good for? What is loyalty good for? What is anything that stays the world and holds the human heart together?

BABY'S BODY BROKE OUT WITH ECZEMA

And Blisters Would Form. Skin Began to Crack Open. After First Day's Use Cuticura Soap and Ointment Baby Slept All Night.

At Myrtle St., W. Lynn, Mass.—At the age of ten months my baby began breaking out on his body. It looked as though he was chafed. He would wake up at night and cry all morning. His skin was red and raw and blisters would form and then bleed. He used to fuss and cry all the time. It wouldn't last the most as much as it would burn so I had to go up and hold him two or three hours at a time. The eczema got so bad the skin began to crack open.

A friend of mine told me to get a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Ointment. I got them, gave him a bath in warm water and Cuticura Soap, then applied the Ointment. In one day I saw a difference and that night he slept all night. The eczema continued growing better until it all disappeared in one week. (Signed) Mrs. Gladys Bernard, October 16, 1914.

Sample Each Free by Mail. With 25-c. Blue Book on request. Ad. from non-ad. "Cuticura" Dept., 7, Boston, Mass. Sold throughout the world.

But for the life of him, he dared not look at her. He wanted the earth to open up and swallow him. The strain of the interview was getting too much for him. The tragic irony of it appealed him, and he had to the moment of his power of thought.

"I always tell Crawley," laughed the irrepressible woman, "that it is those fascinating, soulful blue eyes of his that do the mischief. He looks like a man who has been through a tremendous lot. My son, I really think you ought to wear smoked glasses."

"Poor Mr. Crawley!" interrupted the woman, still laughing. "It is a shame to treat you to all this personal abuse! Godfrey, you ought to be ashamed of yourself. You are such a dreadful tease. Don't you think so, Mr. Crawley?"

"What Crawley thought at that present moment could not be adequately expressed in mere words. What he most wanted to do was to kick Brooke. He had no desire to content himself with smiling faintly and deviously while the other man's words would turn into other channels.

"I don't know what would have happened to him if I hadn't turned him out when I did," said the woman, "but I believe he would have blown his brains out or done something equally foolish."

"Whatever was the matter?" exclaimed the woman, with admirably careful concern.

"I don't know," said the woman, "but I believe he would have blown his brains out or done something equally foolish."

Brooke Almost Tells His Wife of Crawley's Dilemma

Clabby Gave Him Many Pointers AS TOLD BY HIMSELF

By ED W. SMITH.
Well known as a boxer and ring fighter, Willard is presented the tenth installment of his own life, "How I Won the Championship." The first installment appeared in the AMERICAN of Tuesday, April 10.

His salary covers the Chicago Cubs' prize and ring life completely from his birth up to and including the now famous Chicago battle.

HOW I WON THE TITLE—NO. 10.

As told by Jim Willard, heavyweight champion of the world.

Despite the fact that Chicago never could give me as a championship possibility, I have many friends there, made during my numerous stints in the big Western city and I found my way to the city more kindly treated there than in any other city in the country.

Once I was a little figure myself that perhaps they felt sorry for me, especially after they heard I was going to fight Jack Johnson in view of my indifferent showing against the champion.

Has Always Taken Great Interest in Youngsters.

I had a little theatre party and while on the way to the city of food I was attracted to a bunch of youngsters and other young fellows around the corner of Madison and Dearborn streets. They were attracted to me and gathering round what me all sorts of good for nothing.

Security Trust Co. Sells to Me the Stock of Hartford's Leading Tailor for Spot Cash!

A high priced tailor's death is recorded at the start of the busy season. His stock of woollens was complete. There isn't a tailor in this city, and this is my honest belief, who carried as many styles as this stock shows, and the names of the tickets placed on these goods are names noted in this country for quality, style and integrity. John E. Ellison & Son, Philadelphia, dominates. I notice a number of the Shackman selvelges and other names equally as well known in the woolen world.

A representative of the Security Trust Company, appointed by the court as administrators to sell these goods, tells me his prices were $25 to $40, and, judging by the quality of the stock, I think the latter price is about what a tailor buying merchandise from these houses should charge.

I made it plain to the Security Trust Company that I wasn't hungry for woollens and only bought them on their acceptance of a cash proposition, real money, whereby I own the goods for about 20% of their original cost. That means that all the water is squeezed out of these woollens. It means that when I sell you a suit of this goods for $10.75 the average customer is getting a great bargain. Mitchell the Tailor is reaping his regular 10% profit, and I make a customer for future sales.

There are plenty of these goods, thousands of styles. You can buy as many suits as you like at this price, or as many odd trousers as you care to purchase for $3.25 a pair, or I will sell the goods by the yard; and I won't ask whether you are a tailor or not.

COVERT and other COATINGS FOR TOP COATS, and judging by the quality of the goods and the name of the commission house that sold them, it would be necessary to charge $35.00. My Price... Three hundred styles worsted trousers—I don't care how particular you are, you should be satisfied with this range of goods. They must have been bought to sell for $8.00 or $10.00. My Price... $10.75

TROUSERS

Reserve your opinion on trousers. These cloths were bought to sell for $10.00. From the basis of quality, if $12 or $14 were charged for some of them, I would not consider it high. They are worsteds, heavyweights, lightweights and medium-weights, cloths that will stand up forever. Words cannot describe the variety of colorings. Then there are ends of black silk mixtures, ends of black and white mixtures, black and blue cloth, ends just enough for a pair of trousers. My price, take your pick, $3.25. Get in early and get the better selection.

BOSTON AMERICAN

40 AND 52 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, APRIL 23, 1915.

Here Is a Good Picture; Show It to Some Young Man

When he Talks of "An Eye-Opener" Ask Him if His Eye Is Wide Enough Open to See the Future That Whiskey Offers!

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

Many are the expressions men use as they put alcoholic poison into their stomachs.

"Here's looking at you," says one poor drunkard, as he struggles vainly to focus his eyes, holds the rail of the bar with one hand and drinks the whiskey with the glass rattling against his teeth.

"Here's looking at you," he says, and he might well add for his family's sake, "It would be better if I were facing the lid fastened down upon my coffin, and seeing nothing."

"Here's happy days," says another poor creature, doing what he can to make his own days and the days of others UNHAPPY.

"Here's happy days," he says, and pours down the poison that has destroyed the happiness of millions, broken the hearts of mothers and taken the clothing from the backs of children.

The facetious whiskey drinker says most truly, "Here's a nail in your coffin." That is one of the few things really truthful that go with whiskey drinking.

A glass of whiskey is indeed a nail in your coffin. If only the man could hear the tap of the undertaker's hammer, driving in the nails, but he can't.

The artist gives to this excellent picture the title "An Eye-Opener." A good title indeed.

Men take poisonous whiskey or gin in the morning, and say that they take it as an "eye-opener." Would that it might open their eyes wider. If the man in the picture, taking his eye-opener, could REALLY see, he would see the picture above him (himself), and he would find other ways of getting his eyes open with the day's beginning.

Canadians May Be Proud of Their Building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition

It is the Finest Individual Exhibit by Far. It Describes Magnificently Canada's Greatness

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

Citizens of the United States who go to the great Exposition at San Francisco will return with increased respect for Canada and the Canadian Government, thanks to the great building and the extraordinarily fine exhibit that represents Canada's power.

There never was seen a more complete, inspiring exhibit of the wonders of a great country.

The Canadians have gone at the thing thoroughly, they have eclipsed completely the exhibits of every one of our individual States, and that is putting it very mildly.

Every Canadian certainly should visit the Panama-Pacific Exposition, if only to confirm the opinion he probably holds that Canada is a wonderful place and its Government a magnificent and capable Government.

In addition to Canadians, representatives of every State and every county in the United States should make it a point to spend a thoughtful day in the Canada Building.

They will learn there that it is possible for a people not afraid of "paternalism or Government influence" to do wonders for the building up of a country.

And they will see splendid work done by private corporations, railroads and others, under proper and efficient control by the people.

The Canada Building is a magnificent, dignified structure; its employees are intelligent, courteous, well-chose men.

Marvellously ingenuous and striking exhibits are the story of the great nation that lies north of us. Canada is an empire of strength, beauty, prosperity and unlimited possibilities.

Intelligent citizens of this nation will rejoice in that Canadian exhibition, with its many proofs of Canadian intelligence, energy, good government and good citizenship.

Every citizen of the United States should be glad to know that we have as our brother on the north a people so powerful, a realm so vast and prosperous.

Forever there can be between the United States and Canada only friendly feeling and brotherly rivalry.

The Canadians, at great expense and with great intelligence, have sent to our Exposition a demonstration of their power and ability. Every American should make it a point to study it. And every one who knows the difficulty of developing and governing a new country will bow reverently to the power that Canada displays.

The exhibition made cannot properly be described. It is your duty TO SEE IT.

It shows the beginning of man's work in a wild country, the forests, the animals, the wilderness. And it shows man conquering the earth, making his home of the forest, his fertile fields of the rough plains, his servants of the waterfalls, and of all, his happiness in independence and free government.

A wonderful empire is Canada, not a PART of England, but a greater England. The people of this country should be grateful for the exhibition that Canada has sent to us.

See the Canada Building if you can and all the other wonders of the Panama Exposition, and all the wonders of this great country that lie between.

If you want to know the meaning of the word Canada, our northern brother, make it a point, on your visit to the nation, either going or coming, to make a journey through Canadian Empire.

Material is published in all of the Hearst newspapers. Editors "coppers" who think their readers might be interested in the "Exposition held in San Francisco, or who think it desirable to send citizens to travel to the great Exposition and see it, reproduce this editorial or any part of it.

"An Eye-Opener"

Whiskey does open the eyes AT FIRST. Next it makes them dim, then closes them. The man with eyes clearly open will let whiskey alone. (See Editorial.)

The Mystery of "Falling Stars"

What They Really Are and How They Come to Resemble Stars Shooting from Their Places and Darting Wildly Through the Sky

By GARRETT P. SERVICE.

PLEASE explain the phenomena of stars falling from the skies. Last November I was standing in my door, which faces southwest, and looking at two stars, when one of them left its place and fell into space. It looked as if its descent was about 200 feet before it disappeared, but it must have been many million miles, that it traveled during those few seconds. By astronomers these stars "fall from the sky."

"W. P. R., Penobscot, Mass."

This letter shows a curious mingling of instant observation with inaccurate knowledge—a mental phenomenon more common than the physical one of "falling stars," and in its way, quite as worthy of attention.

The phrases "falling stars" and "shooting stars" are responsible for more misunderstanding of scientific facts than any others with which I am acquainted. They are so strikingly descriptive of the effects produced upon the eye by the phenomena in question that they substitute the appearance for the reality in the minds of persons not familiar with the facts of astronomy.

There is no such thing as a falling star, or a shooting star. No star was ever seen to leave its place and drop toward the earth, or to sail away through space. There are a few instances of stars having disappeared from the heavens, and there are other instances of new stars making their appearance there, but no star ever moves from its place in the slightest degree, as far as naked-eye observation can detect.

It is true that the stars are all in motion, but these stellar movements can only be measured with the most refined and accurate instruments known to science. There is an apparent motion, common to all the stars, due simply to the rotation of the earth on its axis, which causes the heavenly bodies to appear to pass slowly through the sky from east to west. There are also a few objects in the sky which look like stars and which do have motions that can be observed with the naked eye, if the observations are continued for many nights in succession. These apparent stars are the earth's sister planets, which, like it, revolve around the sun in orbits millions of miles in circuit. But there are only five of these bodies—Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn—that are ever noticed by a naked eye observer, and none of them moves in the manner of a "falling star." The distances of the planets from the earth vary with their positions in their orbits and run from tens up to hundreds of millions of miles. The true stars are suns, more or less resembling our sun, and they are millions of times more distant than the planets.

What, then, are the phenomena called falling stars? If you call them "meteors," as astronomers do, and disconnect them in your mind from all association with stars, you will have taken the first step toward a comprehension of what they are. A meteor is a piece of solid matter, stony or metallic in composition, which, before it meets the earth, has been traveling through space like a miniature planet, in an orbit probably having the sun for its focus. It moves, as it must do under the law of gravitation, with a velocity comparable with, but considerably greater than, that of the planet, at a similar distance from the sun, for its minute size does not affect its velocity. This velocity in the neighborhood of the earth is about twenty-eight miles per second.

As long as a meteor continues its course outside the earth's atmosphere, it remains absolutely invisible, but if its course is changed by the earth's attraction so as to bring it within the virtual limits of the atmosphere, say within one or two hundred miles of the earth's surface, it is instantly heated to a very high temperature by friction with the air, and it flashes into a flying spark of fire, speeds swiftly across the sky, or appears to drop downward, and usually disappears within a second or two.

There is reason to believe that the vast majority of meteors of this class are not larger than grains of sand or small pebbles. It has been calculated that between ten and twenty millions of them, bright enough to be seen with the naked eye, enter the earth's atmosphere (counting all sides of the globe) every twenty-four hours, while telescopes show fainter ones playing across the depths of the atmosphere, which may number hundreds of millions. Minute as they are, if they struck the earth they would be as fatal to its inhabitants as a rain of shrapnel, but fortunately they are all consumed high in the air.

As to the vexed question of the origin of meteors, there is only room to say that those which appear in periodic showers seem to be connected with comets, and occasionally they travel in the former orbits of comets that have disappeared.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Alas for Romance!

BESSIE smiles at me so sweetly
When she captures me completely
Then she appears as the fly she comes tripping down the screen.
I could fall in love with Bessie
If she didn't look so meany
When she tumbles through the skylight in the most exciting scene.

SUSIE'S eyes are so enchanting
That they set one's heart to panting;
When she's featured in a thriller all the theatres are packed,
I'd go daffy over Susie
If she didn't look so woozy
When they throw her off the engine in the great express train act.

MARY'S features are so charming
That my case would be alarming
If I only looked upon her when she seems a beautiful dream.
But, alas, for little Mary,
When they hit her with the ferry
She surely looks unkindly as she floats off down the stream.

Merely a Suggestion
What Austria needs just now is a good enforceable law abolishing dreams.
Not Any More

Success Is in the Man, Dorothy Dix Shows, Not the Nature of His Work

Any Occupation Promises Great and Satisfactory Results if Person of Average Intelligence Applies All of His Time and His Talents to It

By DOROTHY DIX
A MAN wants to know how a person can determine the kind of work that he is best fitted to do, how to choose the particular occupation in which his energies and abilities will find their most profitable outlet.

I can best answer this question by repeating the reply that one of the wisest and most successful men in New York made to me when I asked him if he thought a certain line of business offered a good opening for a lad in whom I was much interested.

"Any business is a good business and offers brilliant opportunities," replied this wise man. "It doesn't make a particle of difference what occupation a man goes into. It's all in the man himself. You can find fame and fortune in any hole and corner of the working world if you hunt for it hard enough."

This latter day Solomon is right. Success is in us. It's in the punch we put into our work, and not in the work itself. We make our own opportunities, and we write our own price tags.

It doesn't matter what we do, if we only do it well enough.

Exceptions in Few Callings

Of course, there is much exception to that broad statement: There are a few professions, such as music, painting, writing, acting, to which one must have been dedicated before ever he was born in order to achieve any great success. No amount of human industry and striving could make a tone-deaf man a Caruso or Paderewski, or a color-blind man a Whistler, or turn an unimaginative man into a Kipling, or convert a heavy, stolid, wooden-faced man into a Henry Irving.

Yet many misperceived men and women think that they become great and famous artists and writers and painters and actors merely by their aspiring to these careers, and there are thousands in life more bitter or more pathetic than that of the near geniuses, who starve along, year after year, trying to do the thing they have not the talent to do, failure and disappointment always their portion, because they have entered themselves in a race they were unequal to run.

But how are the man and woman who years to stand in the centre of the stage in the spotlight, or to see their names in print, to know whether they are of those predestinated to act or write? Mark Twain once gave a piece of advice to a literary aspirant that has always appealed to me as the last word in common sense on the subject. He said:

Mark Twain's Sound Advice

"Give everything that you can write to any respectable paper that will publish it for two years. If at the end of that time some magazine or newspaper does not want to buy what you write, be sure you have chosen the wrong calling and get busy at something else."

These words are apples of gold in pictures of silver, and if, after having given the so-called fine arts a reasonable trial, the public does not clamor for their work, the embryo writers or actors do well to accept the world's verdict on their ability and turn their attention to other fields.

There are also certain people of definite talents who are called to their careers, whether it be law, or medicine, or sailing the seas, or selling drygoods. They could not be happy doing anything else. They must do that one thing whether there is any profit in it or not, because their whole interest lies in it. It is the breath of their nostrils, without which they cannot live.

These are the most blessed people in the world, because there is no other joy in life equal to that of doing the work we like best, and in which we find our fullest expression. Also these people are almost always successful, because they put their whole heart and soul into doing the thing they love; they are always thinking of how to do it better and better, and that invariably leads them to the goal.

Too Many Drift About

But there are a great many people who have no special talent and no particular inclination toward any one special line of endeavor, and the question is how are these neutral and unenthusiastic individuals to find their way from pillar to post, in the hopes that they will find something to do that will fire their fancies.

For such a one the real remedy is just to take the thing in his sight, and determine to make that, whatever it is, his life work; to quit changing, and to make up his mind that he is going to stick to that particular thing until he makes it a big success. There isn't any subject in the world so dull but what you can find a thousand interesting things about it, and any business is full of excitement and thrills in which a man really puts his own intelligence and there are no tragedies in life more bitter or more pathetic than that of the near geniuses, who starve along, year after year, trying to do the thing they have not the talent to do, failure and disappointment always their portion, because they have entered themselves in a race they were unequal to run.

The excuse for failure oftentimes made is that a man was a square peg in a round hole. This is a confession of inefficiency. The thing for the square peg to do is either to have initiative enough to find the square hole for himself, or else to whittle off his corners until he will fit his circle.

In-Shoots

If the married woman does not succeed in reforming her husband, she can at least punish him.

The man who suffers in silence sometimes bears more pain than the fellow who bellows. But not often.

When we think that God made the beautiful world, we often wonder why he put so many mean people in it.

It is about as hard for an arrogant man to loaf as it is for a loafer to work.

If we must listen to the troubles of some one, those of a woman are generally more interesting than the woes of man.
